Baby's first words can be a golden memory for parents. Here are some ways to encourage baby's first words: 💋 Talk often to your baby. Talk about what you're doing and what's going on around you. This might seem like 💋 a simple suggestion, but listening to your baby can help them develop their language skills. When you talk to your 💋 baby, pause and wait for them to respond. Respond after your baby talks. Don't interrupt your baby while they're trying 💋 to speak. Sing songs and read books that encourage engagement. Stories can inspire your kid to talk [1]. Encourage 💋 your baby to talk by naming the things they point to. For example, if your baby points to a dog 💋 and says "dadadadada," you can respond by saying, "Yes! That's a dog!" and then elaborate with details such as the 💋 dog's color and breed [2]. Don't be like the parents you see in commercials who beam with pride and delight 💋 over every coo and babble that their six-month-old utters. In reality, it could be another six or seven months before 💋 your baby speaks recognizable words. Around nine months, babies can understand much more than they can express verbally, so they 💋 may reply with a series of wails and babbling sounds accompanied by gestures instead of speaking actual words [3]. When 💋 your baby shows interest in a toy, label it for them. For example, "You're playing with a block. Great job! 💋 Do you want to stack the blocks?" While reading, repeat the named objects as your baby points to them. A 💋 simple and fun way to help teach language is to respond when being looked at. Hold up a toy or 💋 your face and say, "Can you find the nose? Where's the nose?" This goes hand in hand with labeling, but 💋 it cues your baby to what to try to say [4].
